Eucalyptus Globulus

(The tree that destroys malarial germs, and renders healthy, miasmatic and fever stricken districts.)

ADELE RITCHE.

"I find Barker's Antiseptic Dental Wash and Tooth Powder very charming and refreshing."

Upon using them for the first time, one naturally exclaims, "How delightfully refreshing," and "What a clean, cool feeling they leave in the mouth."

It is recommended that the wash and the powder be used on the brush together. The whiteness and brightness that come to the teeth after using these preparations is due to the fine polishing properties of the powder and the harmless bleaching qualities of the oxygen which it contains.

Boston Distributors, S. S. Pierce Co., Houghton & Dutton, Jordan Marsh Co., R. H. White Co., Henry Siegel Co., and leading Druggists.

New York Distributors, Hudnut's Pharmacy, 925 Broadway, Siegel Cooper Co., Sixth Avenue, 18th and 19th Streets.

The Eucalyptus tree is one of the largest trees known, attaining a height of 300 to 350 feet. It is a native of Australia and Tasmania and is a characteristic feature of the landscape of those countries.

It was first brought to the attention of the medical world on account of the antiseptic properties of the oil contained in its leaves. So great are the sanitary powers of this tree that it has been planted by different governments in miasmatic and malarial districts with the result that these places have been rendered habitable and healthy.

The oil from the Eucalyptus tree is one of the vegetable antiseptics used in the manufacture of Barker's Antiseptic Dental Wash and Antiseptic Tooth Powder. Its piney taste and camphoraceous odor are quite noticeable in these preparations.

The weary members of a picnic party had piled aboard the special train one hot day, and a thoughtful train hand had carried into the car a pail of delightfully cold fresh water from the section man's well. When the party had been refreshed the half-emptied pail was left standing in the aisle.

Ten minutes later a solitary belated member of the party, hurrying aboard just as the train was about to start, saw the pail, bailed out a cupful and raised it to his lips.

"Oh!" cried his wife, catching him in the act, "don't drink that water, John. We let the Nelsons' dog drink out of that pail!"

Then, noticing her thirsty, overheated husband's look of disappointment as he stayed the cup, the kind-hearted lady hastened to add, soothingly:

"But it was a nice clean dog, dear."

Mrs. Wise—Oh! what do you think? A thief got into the refrigerator and stole the leg of lamb.

Mr. Wise—Pshaw! From the way you went on I thought he had stolen the piece of ice.

A number of recruits were drawn up in line for medical inspection.

One of them was so nervous at the badgering and overbearing manner of the army surgeon that he was momentarily tongue tied.

"What in thunder is your name, and how old are you?" roared the doctor.

"Why the fellow must be deaf!" exclaimed the irate doctor. By the way of testing this theory, he took out his watch and held it to the lad's ear.

"Can you hear it ticking?" he shouted.

The youth shook his head.

The watch was transferred to the other ear, with the same effect.

"Why what do you mean by trying to enlist when you're stone deaf?" cried the surgeon; "you can't even hear the ticking of a watch when it is held within an inch of your ears."

"She's not going!" stammered the flustered recruit, driven to desperation. Then the doctor discovered the watch had stopped.

Griggs—The idea of your letting your wife go around saying that she made a man of you. You don't hear my wife saying that.

Briggs—No, but I heard her telling my wife that she did her best.

What is Home Without a Piano Player ?

A home without a piano player lacks the one essential to complete enjoyment. A piano player to-day is as necessary as a piano. It develops a liking for good music in the younger members of the family and affords endless entertainment to visitors.

The CECILIAN piano player plays with a grace and delicacy of touch not possible to any other instrument. The phosphor bronze pneumatics and metal wind chest in the CECILIAN player make this instrument practically indestructible.

If you would know more about this remarkable piano player we will be pleased to give you a demonstration at our warerooms or to send you literature explaining the CECILIAN in detail. The price of the CECILIAN is $250. It is sold on the rental purchase plan when a full cash payment is not convenient.

Our library of music rolls is the largest in the world for all players.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS in "PETER PAN"

By the Author of "The Little Minister"

Mr. Charles Frohman announces that the long-promised Boston engagement of Miss Maude Adams in her famous play "Peter Pan" will begin at this theatre Monday, October 22. This will be Miss Adams' first visit to Boston in two years. Her success as "Peter Pan" last year attained the proportions of a triumph. The play ran the entire year at the Empire Theatre, New York, to audiences of a size and enthusiasm surpassing even the career of "The Little Minister," and eventually compelled the cancellation of all engagements outside that city. Miss Adams will resume her New York season in "Peter Pan" after the engagement in Boston.

The fame of J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan" is now so widespread as scarcely to need a detailed introduction to Boston audiences. In England and America it has captivated all classes of theatre-goers. Its novelty has refreshed the most blasé, and its wholesomeness has attracted a class for whom the theatre ordinarily has no interest. It has been praised in the prose and poetry of eminent writers. It is the fineness of its humor that made "Peter Pan" an inviting subject for the pen of Mark Twain. Its philosophy and charm evoked a high tribute from W. Dean Howells. The wonder of the play is this sureness of touch. For everybody "Peter Pan" has a distinct excellence and a particular charm. It inspires this fancy or sentiment in one and that early memory or impression in another. In its sweet fancifulness youth finds its surest warrant for a loyal belief in fairies, cowboys, Indians, pirates and crocodiles. For the old it is a reminder of younger days, when hope and cheerfulness held sole sway. Upon the surface it is a dream-while in Fairyland; at the core it is the gentle philosophy of optimism. Barrie's boy Pan—"The Boy Who Would not Grow Up"—bids us ever be boys. He represents the finest of all possible companions—he who will never grow old in mind, grow he never so old in body.

"When Mark Twain was city editor of the Virginia City Enterprise, back in the seventies," said a veteran of Nevada, "he used to brighten up the columns of the paper with comic paragraphs setting forth the advantages of advertising.

"These paragraphs were based on all kinds of odd facts—on murders, on crop reports, on kidnappings, on the weather. I remember one paragraph that ran like this:

"Germany has just discovered a buried forest, in her midst, supposed to be ten thousand years old. If the man who lost it had advertised in the Enterprise the chances are that it would have been returned to him that night."

"I had the good luck to be invited to dine with the king at Marlborough House when I was in London in June," said a western millionaire.

"As I didn't know how to dress the part of a royal guest, I wrote to Lord Knollys, the king's secretary, and asked help.

"Lord Knollys said in his reply:

"As no ladies are to be present, trousers may be worn."

"When I first read that sentence, I said to myself.

"What kind of Neronic revels go on at Marlborough House, anyway?"

"Afterwards, though, I learned that Lord Knollys only meant that at mixed dinners knee breeches were worn at Marlborough House, at stag ones the ordinary evening suit sufficing."

MALDEN, MASS.

Robert Watchorn, the well-known commissioner of immigration, has made a sympathetic and thorough study of the immigrant types that reach New York.

Discussing the types the other day, he said:

"The most naive are the Germans from the smaller and remoter states.

"A beautiful German girl disembarked here the other day. She was tall and strong, blue eyed and yellow haired.

She wanted to know at once if there were any letters for her.

"The postmaster said, by the way of a joke:

"Is it a business or a love letter that you expect?"

"The girl faltered.

"A business letter."

"Well, there's nothing here," said the man.

"The girl hesitated. Then, blushing, as red as a rose, she said:

"Would you mind just looking among the love letters now, sir?"

"We are now," said the passenger in the dripping oilskins, "about to round Cape Horn. Don't you want to come out and see it?"

"I should say not," answered the passenger with the novel. "You made me go and look at Sandy Hook, and it wasn't a hook at all. You can't fool me a second time."

"How does the colonel find room on his breast for all his medals?"

"Why, the more medals he gets the more his chest expands."

One cannot think lightly of a heavy responsibility.

Madge—Chollie Featherbrain has taken up mind-reading.

Marjorie—Poor Chollie! He never did seem to get anything for his money.

If all our dreams came true, there would be a constant shifting of life's activities.

"Mister," began Tired Tiffins, "I want to work—"

"Glad to hear it," interrupted the corpulent citizen. "However, you can't work me."

"Well, doctor, do you think it is anything serious?"

"No, no—just a carbuncle on the back of your neck. But you must keep an eye on it."

Weste Baltimore—I see in to-day's papers that the pope sat behind a large grating—

Rolande Parke—Oh, thank you, thank you! That reminds me. My wife told me to bring some nutmegs home.

The man who passes the plate in church probably understands the meaning of the phrase, "Our fashionable quarter."

Parson Jackson—Does yo' take dis man fo' better or wuss?

The Bride—Ah'll take him jest as he am. If he get any better I'se afraid he'll die, an if he gets wuss, I'll kill him mahself.

Being fancy free means that you are free to fancy whom you please.

Too many people wear themselves out trying to escape work.

STANDARD HOUSEHOLD DISINFECTANT

Housekeepers consider it A REQUIREMENT. You see it in daily use everywhere. On the bathroom shelf, in the kitchen, etc. A SICK ROOM NECESSITY.

"Do you know who I am?" demanded the irate caller.

"Oh, yes!" said the society reporter, "you're Mr. Hogg, who gave the swell dinner last night—"

"Exactly! Now, what in thunder did you mean by calling it a 'swill dinner' in to-day's paper?"

TRADE-MARK

VEGETABLE GERMICIDE

FOR

the prevention of all diseases of agerm nature.

An ideal and effective throat and nose spray. A powerful antiseptic of great healing value in the treatment of cuts, burns, bruises, insect bites, etc. Pleasant in odor, it contains nothing injurious. No family should be without it. For sale by all druggists.

There is a subtitle to the latest of J. M. Barrie's plays. The full name reads, "Peter Pan, or The Boy Who Would Not Grow Up." The subtitle translated contains the whole import of the play. If for the "Boy Who Would Not Grow Up" we read "The Boy Who Would Not Grow Old in Spirit but Would Persist in Clinging to the Ideals of Youth, the Aspirations and Ambition of Life's Finest Season," we then get Mr. Barrie's point. A gentle philosopher of simple speech, J. M. Barrie has given us the boy "Peter Pan" as his prototype of the finest individual happiness. It is difficult to say whether "Peter Pan" was made for Miss Adams or Miss Adams for "Peter Pan," so perfectly is her blithesome, charming personality suited to the character. Her first Boston engagement in the part will begin at the Hollis Street Theatre October 22.

Do you ever take any exercise after a hearty meal, my man?" asked the lady at the back door, with an eye in the direction of her woodpile.

"Do I?" replied the tramp between bites. "Why, ma'am, I've been walking all morning after this one."
